Description

An imposing and finely executed neoclassical standard lamp, crafted in a striking combination of polished brass and contrasting black column, raised on a substantial square plinth base. The stepped base is crisply tiered and set on finely cast paw feet with scrolling acanthus detail, giving the piece both visual weight and sculptural definition. The faces of the upper plinth are adorned with applied laurel wreath mounts, carefully chased to stand in subtle relief against the highly polished brass ground. From the architectural base rises a fluted black column shaft, providing a strong vertical emphasis and an elegant contrast to the warm brass mounts. The column is crowned with an ornate Corinthian-inspired capital, richly cast with acanthus leaves and classical ornament. Above this, a turned and reeded brass upper section incorporates an adjustable stem, allowing the overall height of the lamp to be altered to suit different settings and ceiling proportions. The design as a whole reflects neoclassical principles, combining symmetry, disciplined geometry, and Greco-Roman architectural references to create a piece of considerable presence. The lamp has been professionally ...
