Description

A handsome and elegant set of six Regency period mahogany dining chairs dating to circa 1820. Of classic bar back form, the chairs feature beautifully shaped top rails with subtle scroll terminals, supported by gently tapering uprights and a finely moulded mid rail. The seats are generously proportioned and recently upholstered in a smart, neutral velvet with brass stud detailing, providing both comfort and a refined decorative finish. Raised on turned and reeded front legs with ring turned collars, the chairs display excellent proportion and a strong architectural presence typical of the Regency period. The rear legs sweep gracefully backwards, giving the set a light and elegant stance. The mahogany has a rich, warm tone with an attractive depth of colour and good surface throughout. Solid, sturdy and ready for use, this is a well-balanced and versatile set that would sit beautifully around a Regency, Georgian or contemporary dining table. Seat Height 46.5cm
