Description

An early 16th century oak coffer originating from France. The chest has a five panelled frontage, the carved panels show what appears to be a flower standing in a bottle or vase, with the stems running through a central helmet and surrounded by ribbonous foliage. Above is a gothic iron lock and the cleated lid opens to reveal the original candle box and a large storage space. The coffer shows signs of old wood worm damage and old restorations and losses commensurate with age. The chest has a lovely colour and patina and is in nice condition.
