Description

Antique Edwardian-era Albert chain, dating to approximately 1900, is crafted from solid 9ct rose gold. The chain features a fancy link design with alternating elongated "trombone" links and decorative "fetter" or "love knot" links. The gold exhibits the characteristic warm, coppery rose hue typical of high-quality antique alloys. This piece is equipped with an original swivel-style dog clip fastener at one end and a spring-loaded bolt ring clasp, which were traditionally used to secure a pocket watch but now allow the chain to be worn as a statement choker or collar-length necklace. Every link and terminal component is stamped with "9 375," confirming its solid 9ct gold purity. The chain is in excellent antique condition with wear commensurate with its age. Approximate Dimensions & Weight: Length: 22" 41.9 grams
