Description

There is enduring elegance in a well-proportioned double strand pearl necklace. The balance of graduated pearls, gentle drape and a decorative clasp makes it both refined and versatile. This charming example dates to the 1960s and is composed of two strands of graduating pearls, measuring 45cm and 49.5cm in length. The pearls graduate from approximately 5.5mm to 8mm, creating a pleasing taper and graceful fall at the neckline. The necklace is secured with a floral 9ct gold clasp, beautifully detailed and set with a 6mm amethyst at its centre, framed by split pearls. The clasp measures 12.5mm across and is marked Tongue 9ct – a reassuring indicator of quality mid-century manufacture. Weighing a substantial 46 grams, the necklace has presence without feeling heavy. It has been professionally restrung in February 2026, ensuring strength and longevity, and remains in excellent condition. A timeless and feminine piece – equally suited to daywear and formal occasions – and increasingly desirable in such well-preserved condition. Supplied in a presentation box.
