Description

An early antique Bidjar kelleh, dating from circa 1870-80 in fabulous original condition, stunning abrash in the red dyes (abrash being the term for dye change). The four soft sandy yellow corner spandrels are a particular highlight, as an early dye often using expensive saffron to obtain this colour. A classical Bidjar design with the central motif floating on the soft red background. The minor borders have fabulous pale blues and greens for the guard border too. Condition is really fabulous, with a wonderful soft wool pile and no significant restoration, some preservation to the ends and sides, as you would expect on a carpet dating over 140 years old. This piece would look remarkable in a wider entrance hall or corridor, on a wood floor, sisal or tiled floor. We supply underlay with every one of our rugs to aid their condition and provide safety, as this stops their movement on the floor. If you would like to request a home or showroom visit we can show you this outstanding Bidjar kelleh carpet in person. We travel all over the UK helping customers and interior designers find beautiful carpets for homes, plus our barn showroom is open Monday to Saturday by appoi...
