Description

Antique 19th century oil painting after Sir Edwin Landseer's famous work A Distinguished Member of the Humane Society (1838). This charming Victorian example depicts the iconic Newfoundland dog lying recumbent under a threatening sky, as the sea-water laps against the stone quay. The composition closely follows Landseer's celebrated image, which honoured the breed's reputation for bravery and lifesaving. The dog is beautifully painted with rich brown and white tones and an expressive, dignified presence. A highly decorative piece of antique canine art, ideal for collectors of: Dog paintings Newfoundland / Landseer dog interest Victorian animal art 19th century oil paintings Traditional country house interiors. The painting is housed in the original ornate gilt frame with decorative moulded detail. Attribution: After Sir Edwin Landseer (1802–1873) Medium: Oil on canvas Date: 19th Century Condition: Good antique condition overall. Age-related wear and minor surface marks consistent with age.
