Description

A beautifully honest Victorian pine farmhouse dining table, dating from the late 19th century. This charming country table features a wonderfully worn scrubbed plank top with visible knots and natural character developed through generations of use. Knee Height 62 cm. The table stands on elegant turned legs joined by a simple pine apron, giving it a classic farmhouse silhouette. The proportions are excellent, comfortably seating six to eight people, making it perfect for a kitchen, dining room, or relaxed country interior. The surface has been gently cleaned to preserve its natural patina and warm tone. The top displays the authentic marks, grain and character expected from a working farmhouse table, which add greatly to its charm. A timeless and highly versatile piece that works beautifully in both traditional and contemporary interiors. Condition: Good antique condition with age-related wear to the top consistent with use. Structurally sound and sturdy. Historic strengthening blocks have been added beneath the top.
