Description

Victorian circular mahogany breakfast table, dating to the mid-late 19th century, offering elegant proportions and rich colour throughout. The beautifully figured solid mahogany top displays wonderful natural grain and warm tonal variation, enhanced by a mellow, aged patina developed over time. The circular form makes it ideal for intimate dining, a kitchen breakfast setting, or as a centre table in a sitting room. The table stands on a classic turned pedestal support, raised on a substantial quadraform base with rounded bun feet, providing both stability and traditional Victorian character. The proportions allow comfortable seating for four. Please note: the chairs shown in one of the photographs are not included in the sale but are available to purchase separately under a different listing. Good antique condition consistent with age and use. The top shows minor surface marks commensurate with age but retains a lovely polish and depth of colour. Structurally solid and ready for use. A versatile and timeless Victorian table that works equally well in traditional and modern interiors.
