Description

A nice quality 19th-century hand-coloured print taken from the etching by T.A Prior depicting one of the most famous views of London, the view from the hill in Greenwich Park with a late 20th-century frame. Previously in the collection of Paul Bentley, London book dealer (1931-2022). Figures in the foreground, including a man selling food and drink from a rug in the left foreground, another man with a wooden leg holding a telescope, and others sitting or strolling through the park; the Old Royal Naval College below next to the Thames, which curves away towards the City of London in the distance; and the Greenwich Observatory slightly further uphill to the left. The overall condition is very good. We have noted that the frame has a small piece of gold detailing missing from the top left and has come apart slightly on this corner.
