Description

This exceptionally well carved bust of a 19th century monk has been produced out of a single piece of rich, dense walnut and then mounted onto a separate walnut plinth, all original. It captures this portly and mischievous-looking monk with great expression and character, even down to the wink of an eye and moles on his face. A senior priest possibly reprimands him. This very tactile object is full of charm and character. Finely signed by the artist carver on his left shoulder, J Chartron. Circa 1890, in very good original condition with superb colour and patina. Height 24cm x width 30cm x depth 17cm
