Description

An elegant French walnut dressing table in the Louis XV Revival, dating to the early 20th century. The serpentine shaped top follows the graceful curves of the frame and is finished in beautifully figured walnut with a rich warm tone. Bought from a dealer on Marche Biron at Paris antiques markets. The front features a single long drawer with a shaped apron and carved central detail, providing useful storage. Circa 1890. Above the table sits a highly decorative carved mirror back, centred with an oval mirror plate surrounded by flowing rococo scrolls and foliate carving. The openwork carved supports on either side add further movement and elegance to the design. The table stands on slender cabriole legs terminating in delicate scroll feet, characteristic of the Louis XV style and giving the piece a light and refined appearance. A charming and decorative piece, ideal as a dressing table, vanity table or console, bringing classic French rococo elegance to a bedroom or dressing room interior. Offered in great shape.
