Description

A handsome Regency walnut writing table dating to around 1820, combining elegant proportions with practical design. The rectangular top is beautifully veneered in richly figured rosewood, displaying attractive grain and warm colour. Bought from a private house sale in London's Maida Vale. Beneath the top are two long drawers to the front, providing useful storage for writing implements or documents, each fitted with small original brass escutcheons. The table stands on twin end supports with carved details, joined by a turned stretcher rail, a classic Regency feature providing both stability and visual balance. The base terminates in scrolled feet with brass castors, allowing the table to be easily moved. A refined and practical piece, ideal as a writing desk, side table or console, and a fine example of the elegant restrained craftsmanship typical of the English Regency period. Offered in great shape. Will ship to anywhere in the world - including the US - please get in touch for a shipping quote. Dimensions are in inches (CM): Width x Depth x Height 37.5" (95 cm) x 20" (51 cm) x 30" (76 cm).
