Description

A charming antique brass watering can with a classic cylindrical form and practical design. The body is made from polished brass, giving it a warm golden tone that has developed an attractive aged patina over time. Circa 1880, the can features a tapered spout, ideal for controlled watering, along with a sturdy arched carrying handle across the top and a side handle for ease of pouring. Simple reeded bands decorate the upper and lower edges of the body, adding subtle detail while maintaining the clean, utilitarian aesthetic typical of traditional garden equipment. Both decorative and functional, this vintage brass watering can would make a lovely addition to a garden room, conservatory, or interior display, and is equally suitable for practical use or as a decorative accent. Offered in great shape. Will ship to anywhere in the world - including the US - please get in touch for a shipping quote. Dimensions are in inches (CM): Width x Depth x Height 20" (51 cm) x 8" (20 cm) x 18" (46 cm).
