Description

A well-proportioned George III oak livery cupboard – circa 1780. With a moulded cornice above two rectangular fielded panels flanked by arched panel doors enclosing a large hanging space. This space retains its original wooden hooks but has also been fitted with two later brass rails, making this a useful piece in the modern home. The base features three further fielded panels and two lower drawers. Finished on stile feet. The overall condition is excellent with age-related wear and tear and a wonderful deep rich colour. A stunning example of its type that would be a statement addition to a large bedroom or boot room.
