Description

This is a fabulous quality, all original 18th century oak refectory table. Full of character from years of use and in great overall condition with aged patina. The turned thick legs and worn stretchers give this table a great presence and ideal as a narrow dining table or large console. The top is two planks of oak. The top comes off and is held in place with original pegs. Always great to find English country furniture like this in untouched honest condition. Height 76cm Length 287cm Depth 72cm
