Description

A superb quality large antique Victorian mahogany and satinwood inlaid display cabinet, dating to the late 19th century and crafted with exceptional attention to detail. The cabinet is beautifully constructed in rich mahogany with contrasting satinwood inlay, featuring elegant marquetry panels, oval paterae, and finely detailed decorative banding throughout. The upper section comprises two glazed display cabinets with shaped glazing bars, flanking a central mirrored compartment, ideal for showcasing decorative objects, antiques, or collections. Below, a pair of inlaid cupboard doors provide practical storage, while the whole piece is supported on finely turned and carved legs united by a shaped undertier shelf. The breakfront form and architectural pediment top give the cabinet a strong presence, making it a true statement antique display cabinet or bookcase suitable for both traditional and contemporary interiors. A fine example of Victorian craftsmanship, combining scale, elegance, and functionality. Circa 1890.
