Description

A charming antique oil painting on oak panel depicting a pastoral scene of a shepherd resting with his animals, including a standing horse and livestock set within a gentle landscape. The composition, subject matter and handling are very much in the manner of Rosa di Tivoli (Philipp Peter Roos, 1655–1706), known for his lively depictions of animals in rustic settings. Executed in the late 17th to early 18th century style, this piece is best described as a follower of Rosa di Tivoli, capturing the essence of his work with warm tones, naturalistic animal forms and a tranquil rural atmosphere. Such cabinet-sized paintings were popular with Grand Tour travellers and collectors of the period. The panel is stable and well preserved for its age. There is visible craquelure, surface wear and some areas of old varnish and light surface marks, consistent with age. The frame shows losses and wear to the gilding. Overall, the piece displays attractively and retains good decorative appeal. Price £650 Contact 07970119030
