Description

This is an antique smoker's box. An English, oak and brass cigar case, dating to the Edwardian period, circa 1905. A superbly appointed gentleman's accessory, offering refined presentation and practical storage for cigars and smoking requisites. A charming and functional Edwardian cigar case with enduring appeal. Crafted from quality oak with fine grain interest throughout. Finished with rich caramel hues, and presenting a desirable aged patina. Drawer dressed with an inset, working lock — key present. Displays fine craftsmanship and attention to detail. Accentuated with brass cappings to the lid corners and fascia. Unmarked shields to the lid and fascia, ideal for personalised engraving. Counterweighted drawer opens the lid in smooth unison. Thoughtfully arranged interior for the organised smoker. Upper compartment divided for Corona and Petit Corona sized cigars. Lower drawer hosts a pair of divisions suitable for King Size cigarettes. Central section within the drawer houses a match striker and cigar cutter. Pair of drop handles to the sides for ease of carriage. Ideal for the study, lounge or gentleman's club setting, this antique smoker's box is a fine accent for the discerni...
