Description

A fabulously ornate antique four-light table lamp in cast brass, designed in the form of a classical candelabra. Likely dating from between the early 1910s to 1920s. The piece features a decorative stepped base with a fluted central column, supporting four outward curving arms fitted with early bayonet bulb holders. The design retains elements of traditional candle forms, a common feature of early electric lighting. The brass has developed a rich, aged patina over time, with wear consistent with age, adding to its overall character. A decorative and functional lighting piece, ideal for adding warmth and interest to an interior.
