Description

This rare and striking pair of Victorian cast iron garden tables captures the ornate grandiosity of 19th-century outdoor design. Each table features an intricately pierced, circular lattice-work top, designed to prevent rainwater pooling while providing a delicate aesthetic. The most remarkable feature is the highly decorative tripod base, characterized by elaborate Rococo-style scrolls, foliate motifs, and elegant hoof feet. Possessing an authentic, weathered patina that highlights the sharp detail of the original castings, these tables are as structurally robust and heavy. They offer a sophisticated, sculptural element for any garden, terrace, or orangery.
