A delightful genre painting of a young girl with a cat by Charles Burton Barber. A girl with blonde hair can be seen leaning back against a table with a saucer of milk in her hand. Meanwhile, a tabby cat rubs its head against her arm as she holds the dish away from it. This painting was exhibited at the Royal Institute of Painters in Oil in 1883, no. 203. A sketch of the painting appeared in the illustrated catalogue of the exhibition and was also reproduced in The Graphic on 15 December, 1883, p20. The painting received positive reviews from art critics at the time. Charles Burton Barber was born in Great Yarmouth in 1845 to Charles and Elizabeth Lake Barber (née Blowers). His father was a printer and bookseller who later joined h...
