Description

Imperial Russian Peridot & Diamond Trellis Brooch. Attributed to Carl Fabergé | Provenance: Paris, New York, & London. A centrepiece of spectacular scale: a ~19.00-carat octagonal step-cut natural peridot. The stone exhibits a vibrant "Imperial Green" saturation and superb transparency, a hallmark of high-tier Russian jewellery from the late 19th century. The peridot is housed in an intricate, open-work "trellis" frame of interlocking knots, densely encrusted with antique rose-cut and old-mine-cut diamonds. Weight: 9 grams. Dimensions: 1.25 inches | 31.75 millimetres (3.175 centimetres). Construction: Silver-topped 14K Gold (traditional Imperial Russian technique). Hallmarks: Struck with the 56 zolotnik gold mark and the Cyrillic '??' (KF) maker's mark for the House of Carl Fabergé. Provenance & Collection History: This brooch represents an "Historical Marriage" between the world's most prestigious jewellery hubs: Paris (1928): Acquired in Paris during the legendary era of the movement of Russian treasures to the West. The Presentation Case: Housed in its original antique silk-lined case from, 12 Rue de la Paix, Paris, Rome. Technical analysis confirms the velvet ...
