Description

A charming 18th century oak sideboard dresser, dating to circa 1740, offering a wonderful country house character. Crafted from solid oak, the piece features a classic and practical layout with three spacious drawers over two cupboard doors, providing ample storage. The drawers retain brass handles, and the cupboard doors are fitted with a working key. The oak has developed a rich, warm patina over time, with pleasing grain. There is evidence of historic worm, typical for furniture of this age; however, this is long inactive and the piece has been professionally treated again for complete peace of mind.
