Description

A Derby porcelain figure of a recumbent stag, produced during the Patch period, circa 1759-1769. The figure is of small scale and represents one of the early animal models that defined Derby production in the mid-18th century. The model corresponds to "Stag and Doe at Lodge" (E99), as recorded in Bradshaw, with the present example closely matching the documented size. The compact proportions are typical of early production rather than later enlarged versions. The modelling shows the characteristic early Derby approach, with expressive yet slightly simplified anatomy, softly applied enamels, and a densely applied bocage. The base is left rough beneath, with a vent hole and visible patch marks, consistent with early manufacture. Measurements Height: 10 cm (3.9?) Width: 9 cm (3.5?) Depth: 5.5 cm (2.2?) Weight: 135 g Condition Chips to the bocage. The stag itself is undamaged. The antlers and the front section of the bocage appear to be coated with a later varnish or clear lacquer.
