Description

A charming 19th-century mahogany pot cupboard, neatly proportioned and full of period character. The raised gallery top features shaped side handles, giving the piece a light, portable feel, while the single cupboard door below provides practical enclosed storage. The cupboard stands on elegant turned supports, all united by an X-shaped stretcher that adds both stability and decorative appeal. The mahogany has developed a warm, mellow patina over time, enhancing the simple, functional design typical of early Victorian furniture. Presented in excellent antique condition, it remains sturdy, well-balanced and ready to place. A versatile and attractive little cupboard that works beautifully as a bedside or lamp table in both traditional and contemporary interiors.
