Description

Here we have a superb quality 19th 'boat cradle' - the hull constructed with finely varnished clinker nailed into narrow ribs with clenched copper nails, with two suspension points. This cradle was built as an apprentice piece and is based on, or is believed to have been made as one of the prototypes for the cradle presented to Queen Victoria and now housed at Osborne House, this piece has been painstakingly made by a skilled professional and is a truly magnificent surviving example of craftsmanship. It is in fine condition for its age with a small area of loss to the very front end of the base. Size: 103 x 45 x 37cm c1890 Due to size and risk of damage collection from our Hebden Bridge shop is preferred, or we can deliver by prior arrangement.
