Description

Exceptional Art Deco Triple Strand Cultured Pearl Necklace with Diamond Clasp, 1920s – Certified A beautifully composed Art Deco triple strand pearl necklace, dating to the 1920s and designed with a distinctive side-set clasp of remarkable elegance. Formed from three gently graduated strands of cultured saltwater pearls, this necklace displays a soft cream tone enriched by delicate pink and green overtones. The pearls possess a deep, attractive lustre and are individually hand-knotted, allowing them to drape fluidly and sit gracefully at the collarbone. The design is elevated by its exceptional clasp — a finely crafted square panel set with nine pearls and forty-eight rose cut diamonds. Executed in the traditional manner, the stones are set in silver to enhance their brilliance, with an 18ct gold reverse and a 9ct gold tongue. Positioned to sit elegantly to one side of the neck, the clasp becomes a feature in its own right, embodying the geometric refinement of the Art Deco period. Accompanied by an AnchorCert Gem Lab report confirming the pearls as cultured saltwater and the diamonds as natural, this is a piece that combines authenticity with enduring style. A grace...
