Description

A beautifully matched pair of 19th-century mahogany demi-lune console tables, an increasingly scarce find in today's market. Each table is crafted from richly toned mahogany with a warm, lustrous finish that accentuates the natural grain. The shaped apron is finely carved with scrolling foliate motifs. Standing on slender, tapering legs with carved detailing, the pair has a refined, balanced presence—ideal for framing an entrance hall, flanking a fireplace, or adding symmetry to any interior. Their scale and craftsmanship make them both practical and decorative, embodying the understated sophistication of late Georgian and early Victorian design. A rare opportunity to acquire a true pair, preserved in excellent condition and ready to place.
