Description

A finely modelled Royal Worcester porcelain figure of a dancing woman, from the recognised “Grecian Maiden” series, model 1827, dating to circa 1928. The model originates in the Hadley period and remained in production due to its enduring appeal. The figure is captured in motion, holding castanets (krotala), introducing a rhythmic quality associated with Spanish dance and flamenco. The composition maintains a classical balance while incorporating movement. The modelling reflects Hadley’s influence, with flowing drapery and controlled asymmetry forming a continuous silhouette. The surface is finished in a grey-toned pearlescent glaze with subtle transitions into smoky blue, creating a soft luminous effect. Gilding is applied with restraint to highlight key details. The underside bears a puce Royal Worcester mark and model number 1827. The combination of dot system and “Made in England” inscription indicates a transitional period in factory marking practice. A well-preserved and balanced example of this established Worcester model. Measurements Height: 21 cm Width: 8 cm Depth: 7 cm Weight: 250 g. Condition Excellent condition.
