Description

A charming and well-proportioned 18th century oak dresser, constructed in two sections, dating to around 1770. The base features three graduating drawers with attractive cockbeaded fronts, all fitted with brass handles, flanked by two cupboard doors enclosing useful storage. There is a single fixed shelf in each cupboard with decorative shaped edge. The base is finished with elegant canted corners and panelled ends, standing on shaped bracket feet. The upper rack offers generous shelving and metal hooks along the top, ideal for displaying ceramics or glassware. A wonderfully warm-toned piece with rich patina and excellent colour throughout.
