Description

A charming mid 19th century smokers bow armchair, constructed in ash with a beautifully figured elm seat, dating to circa 1850. This classic country chair features a gently curved bow back with elegant scroll terminals, supported by well-turned spindle supports, giving it both strength and visual rhythm. The solid elm seat displays particularly attractive grain and a comfortable, shaped profile, sitting above a robust ash frame with turned legs united by a traditional crinoline stretcher. The proportions are generous and inviting, making it not only a decorative piece but also a practical everyday chair. Seat Height 45cm Originally designed for comfort and durability, smokers bow chairs remain highly sought after for their versatility — equally suited to a farmhouse kitchen, hallway, or as an occasional chair in a more formal interior. The warm colour and honest patina reflect years of use and add to its authentic appeal.
