Description

A truly charming Edwardian cluster ring, beautifully crafted in rich 18ct yellow gold and exemplifying the refined elegance of the early 20th century. At its centre sits a captivating deep blue synthetic sapphire, its rich colour enhanced by a delicate surround of fourteen vibrant natural rubies. The stones are set within a finely worked milgrain border, lending a soft, antique finish that speaks to the craftsmanship of the period. The gently raised setting and beautifully shaped under-gallery complete the design, allowing the ring to sit gracefully on the finger while catching the light with every movement. Elegant, feminine and wonderfully wearable, this is a classic Edwardian cluster of enduring appeal. Accompanied by a gemmological report confirming the synthetic sapphire and natural rubies, this is a fine example of period jewellery where beauty and innovation meet.
