Description

This evocative Art Deco bronze presents a young female figure in a moment of quiet vulnerability. Standing gracefully with her legs gently together, she tilts her head to one side, pressing a soft drape to her cheek as if seeking comfort. Her expression is tender and introspective, conveying a delicate melancholy that contrasts with the poise of her stance. The figure is beautifully modelled, with smooth, elongated lines characteristic of the Art Deco aesthetic. A two-tone patination enhances the composition, with the warm golden bronze of the body offset by the cooler green of the draped garment. Mounted on a striking variegated portoro marble base, the sculpture achieves a harmonious balance between emotional sensitivity and refined elegance, exemplifying Chiparus' mastery of both form and mood. Signed D H Chiparus on the edge of the young woman's drape.
