A charming early Victorian mahogany two-tier dumb waiter, dating to circa 1850. The piece features two circular revolving tiers, raised on a turned central column and supported by a classic tripod base with shaped legs, offering both stability and elegance. Constructed in solid mahogany, the tiers display a warm, mellow tone with attractive figuring and a nicely aged surface. The revolving action allows for practical use, originally intended for serving but equally suited today as a side table, lamp table, or decorative stand. Top tier 50cm D circa 1850
