Description

An antique William IV English figured mahogany pedestal dining table of exceptional quality featuring a solid tilt top and raised on a bold central column with finely carved feet. This is a particularly elegant example, the well proportioned rectangular top displaying a rich even colour and attractive figuring with softly rounded corners that give a refined and timeless look. Unlike extending or drop leaf tables this piece retains its original solid one piece top giving it a greater sense of permanence and quality. The top tilts to a vertical position for storage, a practical feature that allowed these tables to be moved aside when not in use making them ideal for dining rooms and reception spaces where flexibility was required. The base is of outstanding form with a substantial turned column leading to a shaped quadripartite platform and beautifully carved lobed feet. This strong architectural design is typical of the William IV period combining confident proportions with restrained decoration. A refined and highly usable dining table offering both decorative impact and practical function, equally suited to a classic or contemporary interior. Condition report Very good a...
