Description

A large and atmospheric 19th century oil on canvas landscape, depicting a romantic mountainous river scene with figures, painted in the Continental manner. The composition centres on a rushing river cascading through rocky terrain, with wooded banks and distant mountains beyond, all under a warm, glowing sky. Small figures and cattle animate the middle ground, adding scale and narrative to the scene. The painting has a pleasing palette of rich earth tones and soft golden light, typical of the period, and works well as a decorative statement piece. Presented in a good quality original gilt frame of classical form, which complements the painting nicely. The surface shows age-related craquelure and a slightly uneven varnish, consistent with its age, but this does not detract from its overall decorative appeal. Circa 1840.
