Description

George V mahogany 3-pillar dining table This impressive George V mahogany 3-pillar dining table (circa 1910-1920) is a superb example of early 20th-century craftsmanship, offering exceptional versatility and elegant design. Beautifully made in richly figured mahogany, the table includes two additional leaves, allowing it to extend to a generous 384 cm (151ins)—ideal for large gatherings and formal dining. The table can also be used without the leaves, measuring 277 cm closed, making it adaptable for everyday use or smaller dining spaces. It stands on three finely gun barrel turned columns with elegant splay legs, each fitted with cast square castors for smooth movement and refined period character. All 3 columns feature quadruple legs, ensuring superb stability even when fully extended. A striking and functional George V dining table that brings classic English style to any dining room. A stunning warm mahogany colour. Imagine dining with your family and friends around this splendid and striking table. The pleasure ownership will give you. Key Features • George V period mahogany 3-pillar dining table • Includes two removable leaves for versatility • Can be used fully ext...
