Description

A handsome and unusual pair of 19th century Victorian walnut hall chairs, featuring beautifully turned barley twist supports and finely carved frames. These chairs have been professionally reupholstered in luxurious Lee Jofa "Taplow" velvet in Clay Plum, giving them a refined and contemporary feel while complementing the warmth and richness of the walnut. With their elegant proportions and distinctive form, they make ideal hall, bedroom or occasional chairs, offering both decorative impact and practical use. Of particular note is their provenance from Lackington Mill, Dorset, adding an extra layer of interest and history to an already characterful pair. The combination of authentic Victorian craftsmanship, quality walnut construction, and high-end upholstery makes these a rare and versatile decorative seating option. Seat Height 34 cm (Lower seat height is typical of this style, making them best suited as hall or occasional chairs rather than formal dining seating.) Condition: Excellent condition. Solid walnut frames with a lovely aged patina. Recently and professionally upholstered to a high standard. Minor age-related wear consistent with their period.
