Description

A stunning antique French Rococo ormolu fire screen, dating to circa 1880, and beautifully crafted in richly detailed gilt bronze. This highly decorative piece showcases the elegance and flowing curves typical of the Rococo style, with intricate scrollwork, foliate detailing, and a finely shaped frame. The central panel is fitted with a woven mesh screen, designed to protect from sparks while maintaining visibility of the fire, making it both practical and decorative. Raised on elegant scrolling feet, the piece stands securely and makes a striking statement in front of any fireplace. The quality of the ormolu casting and gilding highlights the craftsmanship of late 19th century French furniture, making this an ideal addition for collectors, interior designers, or those seeking a luxurious antique accent. Perfect as a fireplace screen, decorative fire guard, or statement interior piece, this antique French screen brings timeless elegance to both traditional and contemporary settings. Dimensions: Height 83cm x Width 71cm x Depth 21cm A rare and highly decorative antique French ormolu fire screen of exceptional quality.
