Date of manufacture: 19th Century

Description

A handsome Arts & Crafts elm settle of slightly convex form, with shaped end supports, small open arms and elongated tapering sledge feet with exposed dowel construction. A well-proportioned piece with strong, simple lines typical of the period. This is the sort of piece that works well in a hallway, boot room, landing or period interior. It has a solid, practical feel without being overly decorative. The elm has a warm tone with attractive grain throughout, particularly across the seat and shaped ends. The exposed construction details are typical of the Arts & Crafts movement, a style that continues to be very popular. Condition Solid and usable overall with age-related wear, surface marks, scuffs and signs of use in keeping with age. There are historic splits, marks and old imperfections to the timber, all of which add to its character. Signs of historical woodworm are present, but we treat everything regardless. Overall, it presents well and has a lovely timeworn look. Length 144cm Width 63cm seat depth 36cm Height 37/119.5cm Please be aware that this item does show signs of use, which is to be expected considering its age. These signs of wear ad...
