Description

A beautifully elegant Edwardian necklace, dating to circa 1910 and exquisitely crafted in rich 15ct gold. This graceful antique necklace is designed in the refined foliate style so beloved of the Edwardian era, with a delicate knife-edge bar suspending a shimmering circular-cut white sapphire above an ornate foliate surmount. Each side is set with three sparkling white sapphires, leading the eye to a beautifully proportioned pear-cut aquamarine drop of soft icy blue. Light, feminine and wonderfully sophisticated, this necklace moves beautifully when worn and sits perfectly at the neckline. The combination of cool aquamarine and glittering white sapphires creates an ethereal, timeless quality synonymous with the finest Edwardian jewellery. Particularly special is the survival of its original integral trace link chain, secured with a traditional barrel clasp, adding greatly to its authenticity and charm. A truly enchanting antique necklace — perfect for lovers of refined period jewellery, bridal wear, or as an heirloom gift.
