Description

This beautiful little chanteh (vanity-bag) was made by Qashqa'i tribes in Fars province, south-west Persia during the last quarter 19th century. The face of the bag is in glossy, knotted-pile and comprising an ivory central symbol on a madder-red ground and surrounded by four minor symbols. The top of the bag has brocaded lappits with the remains of the ties on the reverse. The back of the bag contains multi-coloured, narrow bands in plain-weave technique. In excellent condition. 25cm x 28cm (10" x 11").
