Description

A very small and beautiful English clock. The diminutively sized, 8 day duration, 5 pillar, double chain fusee movement, with Anchor Recoil escapement, stop work to both trains and hourly rack striking on a rear-mounted coiled steel gong of superb tone and resonance. Also having shouldered plates and a pendulum locking knob for transit. Behind a 3 7/8" wide (visible), gilded brass dial with black 'written' Roman hour numerals and an outer minute track. The dial centre is finely engine turned. The finely cut steel hands are blued and the hour hand is 'spade' style. Contained in a fine, 'Pagoda' topped, rosewood '4-glass' case. The swept top carries a cast brass, polished urn style finial and the body of the top has an inlaid brass line. The front locking and glazed door has a gilded brass 'sight frame' behind the glass panel and the case sides have glazed chamfer top apertures with conforming brass framing. The also locking rear door has a cloth-backed, fretwork sound aperture. The body of the case has a short, plinth to 3 sides with a moulded top and sits upon 4 flat bun feet. The clock also has a wall-mounted bracket which is optional to use and is either original or ...
