Description

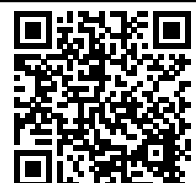

A Charming Set Of 6 Early 19th Century Matching Ash & Elm Farmhouse Kitchen Windsor Dining Chairs, Having Scribed Edge To Typical Hooped Backs, With Elegant Turned Stick Spindles And Torpedo Supports To Back, Over Well Figured Shaped Seats, Raised On Very Elegant Turned Legs And Stretchers. These are a really quite beautiful set of basically matching kitchen dining chairs. The only real differences are a slight variation in dimensions due to the natural movement of wood over hundreds of years which has resulted in some having a marginally lower seat than others. It was quite rare for windsor chairs to actually be made and supplied in a set all at the same time, with families instead tending to order them on an ad hoc, when required type basis. These chairs are constructed from lovely ash and elm timbers and have retained a lovely colour and patina to go with how beautifully figured they are. They are sound in construction with no loose joints to speak of and have been through our workshop for a good clean and polish. They have real elegance, but also practicality and are surprisingly comfortable to sit on for day to day use. They would suit a wide variety of tables ...
