Description

An antique Regency style figured mahogany oval dining table of outstanding quality, featuring a beautifully selected and richly figured top with striking natural grain throughout. The surface is framed by a finely executed satinwood crossbanded border with delicate line inlays, giving the piece a crisp and refined edge that immediately signals quality. The top is particularly impressive, with deep flowing figuring that creates a symmetrical and almost flame-like pattern across the surface. This is the sort of timber selection seen in higher-end cabinetmaking and gives the table real presence in a room. It stands on an elegant satinwood base with a central turned column leading down to four swept legs, each finely shaped and terminating in original brass caps and castors. The contrast between the warm mahogany top and the lighter satinwood base adds a sophisticated and decorative element, making it far more interesting than a standard dining table of the period. Tables of this form were designed to be both practical and visually impressive, commonly used in formal dining rooms where they could comfortably seat guests while also acting as a centrepiece when not in use.
