Description

A late 19th century Liberty & Co. inlaid Moorish table of octagonal shape in very good original condition. This table consists of a profusely inlaid mother of pearl, abalone and various exotic wood top with central inlaid panel of Arabic symbols surrounded by geometric designs with inlaid borders and stringing with outer inlaid mother of pearl and abalone border. This leads down to eight side panels, all with mother of pearl and exotic wood inlaid design and inlaid wood decoration below, in between each of these sections a broken black and light wood line design, the eight legs forming an arch between each section giving the table an architectural influence from the East. The first Liberty & Co. catalogue known to exist was produced in 1881 and this celebrated Oriental items and also set the fashion for the store for years and years. Liberty & Co. developed the idea of decorating rooms in an 'oriental' style in the 1880's and exhibited various items with styles from Exotic countries. Similar examples of these tables from Liberty & Co. can be seen in the book 'Liberty's Furniture 1875-1915, The Birth of Modern Interior Design' by Daryl Bennett, pages 28,29,30 etc....
