Description

A gorgeous and highly elegant Victorian five stone turquoise and diamond ring, dating to circa 1890 and beautifully handcrafted in luxurious 18ct gold. This exquisite ring is set with five perfectly matched cabochon turquoise stones in the most desirable duck egg blue hue — vibrant, luminous and wonderfully smooth, with exceptional colour consistency across all five stones. Between each turquoise rests a delicate rose cut diamond accent, ten in total, lending a subtle antique sparkle that enhances the ring's refined beauty without overwhelming its graceful design. The ornate carved scroll gallery and finely detailed shoulders are particularly attractive, displaying the superb craftsmanship and romantic decorative flourishes so loved in the late Victorian period. Beautiful from every angle, this ring combines elegance, rarity and timeless femininity. Turquoise was especially cherished during the Victorian era as a symbol of love, protection and remembrance, making this not only a beautiful jewel but also a deeply evocative one.
