Description

Elegant antique satinwood display cabinet dating from the late 19th to early 20th century, beautifully crafted with rich satinwood veneers, fine inlay work, and a shaped glazed display door. This tall antique display cabinet features delicate crossbanding, oval and diamond inlaid decoration, fluted columns, and slender carved legs, showcasing the refined craftsmanship associated with Edwardian and Sheraton Revival furniture. The curved glazed door opens to reveal fitted glass display shelves, ideal for displaying porcelain, silver, glassware, antiques, or decorative collectibles. The warm satinwood tones and elegant proportions make this cabinet perfectly suited to both traditional and contemporary interiors. A highly decorative antique vitrine cabinet offering excellent display storage while adding classic English elegance to a hallway, dining room, living room, or study. An exceptional piece for collectors, interior designers, and buyers seeking authentic antique satinwood furniture with timeless appeal. Height: 212cm Width: 80cm Depth: 52cm
