Description

Antique Georgian Mahogany Pembroke Table Circa 1810 Regency . An Elegant solid Mahogany Pembroke table with fitted Flatware Drawer. This exceptional George III to Regency period Mahogany Pembroke table, dating from circa 1810, balances superb functionality with the restrained elegance characteristic of early 19th-century English cabinetmaking. Constructed from choice cuts of dense, solid Mahogany, the table features a beautifully figured top with two drop-leaf flaps that operate smoothly on traditional wooden fly-rails. When extended, the top presents a uniform, flat surface, which is true and free from any major warping, bordered by a crisp, hand-cut reeded edge. The elegant proportions and versatile design make it an ideal choice for use as an occasional dining table, a sophisticated side table, or a spacious writing desk. The front of the table houses a beautifully constructed full-depth drawer, revealing a rare and highly desirable fitted interior. The drawer dividers form distinct compartments meticulously lined in a high-quality green baize, perfectly conceived for the storage of fine silverware, flatware, or writing implements. Indicative of exceptional workshop ...
